

HISTORIC AMERICAN BUILDING SURVEY: MONTGOMERY COUNTY

The National Park Service established HABS in 1933 to provide jobs for architects and photographers who were unemployed following the Great Depression. The mission of the program was to create an archive of the country's historic architecture, through photographs and measured drawings. The HABS collection, housed at the Library of Congress, is an outstanding historic and architectural record of some of the county's earliest buildings. Most of the photos and drawings of Montgomery County sites were completed between August and October 1936. Properties recorded more recently include Bonfields Garage (1987) and Moneysworth (1996). The Library of Congress has digitized HABS photos and drawings. They are available online at <http://lcweb.loc.gov/rr/print/>. The following list of sites is arranged by planning area (see geographic map).
